Dear ladies and gentlemen,

I am delighted to welcome the organisers, participants and guests of the 22nd International Agriculture Exhibition – AgroWorld Uzbekistan 2027, both personally and on behalf of the Parrandasanoat Association of Poultry Farmers of Uzbekistan!

Poultry farming is one of the most important agricultural subsectors, making a substantial contribution to the national food security and meeting demand for high-quality, affordable food. Poultry meat and eggs play a special role in the daily diet thanks to their high nutritional value, complete protein, vitamins and essential microelements. Steady demand for these products calls for further development of the subsector, greater production efficiency and modern approaches at every stage of the production chain.

Member enterprises of the Parrandasanoat Association are steadily strengthening their production capacity, with particular attention to both increasing output and improving product quality. Their priorities include modernising production facilities with advanced poultry housing and feeding technologies, improving animal health and hygiene standards, strengthening quality control systems and expanding product ranges. These efforts help producers in Uzbekistan become more competitive, strengthen their position in the domestic market and create more opportunities to enter the international markets.

The international cooperation is particularly valuable in this context, enabling professionals to share experience, discover advanced technological solutions and build business relationships with their overseas partners. AgroWorld Uzbekistan and its extensive business programme offer precisely these opportunities and have served as an important meeting platform for agricultural professionals for many years. The exhibition introduces industry professionals to modern equipment, the latest technologies, innovative solutions and recent developments across agriculture, including poultry farming. Participants assess the industry's development prospects, explore new products and services, and find effective ways to improve productivity and product quality.

I am confident that AgroWorld Uzbekistan 2027 will once again bring together many leading producers from Uzbekistan and abroad, suppliers of equipment and technological solutions, researchers, experts and agribusiness professionals. The exhibition will provide an effective forum for constructive dialogue, sharing practical experience, discussing current industry challenges and building new, mutually beneficial partnerships.

I wish all participants and guests of the 22nd International Agriculture Exhibition – AgroWorld Uzbekistan 2027 a productive event, successful negotiations, promising business contacts and every success in achieving their goals.

U. Axmedov,
First Deputy Chairman
