

On behalf of the Uzpromstroyaterialy Association, and on my own behalf, I am pleased to extend my warm greetings to the participants and guests of Uzbekistan Construction & Interior Week 2026.

In recent years, Uzbekistan has been implementing construction projects unprecedented in both scale and pace. These transformations clearly demonstrate the country's sustainable economic development, growing well-being of its population, and formation of a modern, high-technology infrastructure.

Within the framework of the initiatives launched by Shavkat Miromonovich Mirziyoyev, the President of Uzbekistan, large-scale construction of residential complexes, administrative buildings and social infrastructure facilities is actively underway. Successful implementation of these initiatives depends to a great extent on the development of construction materials industry — a key sector that forms the foundation for creation of environmentally friendly, energy-efficient and durable buildings and structures.

Today, the domestic construction materials industry is demonstrating steady positive growth. The product ranges are expanding, production and export volumes are increasing, and innovative technology solutions are being actively implemented. These processes contribute to strengthening the sector's competitiveness, improving construction quality, and creating favourable conditions for the effective delivery of large-scale national programmes.

The achievement of such ambitious objectives requires a widespread adoption of advanced construction methods, digital technologies, and next-generation smart materials that meet international sustainable development standards.

In this context, Uzbekistan Construction & Interior Week, bringing together the 27th Uzbekistan International Construction Exhibition UzBuild 2026 and the 7th International Conference of Construction Industry ICCI 2026 takes on a particular significance.

It serves as a unique platform for showcasing state-of-the-art equipment, modern construction materials and high-technology solutions, as well as an effective mechanism for establishing international networks, discussing strategic priorities for industry development, and shaping the key trends of the future.

I am confident that participation in the events under the Week will become an important step towards strengthening business ties, unlocking new opportunities, and achieving ambitious goals across the entire construction sector.

I wish all participants and guests a productive event, promising partnerships, and every success in the implementation of their projects.
